Spider Strategies: one of “Top 50 Places to Work”

Software company named to Washington Business Journal's annual top 50 list

WASHINGTON, DC — April 25, 2008 — Spider Strategies, Inc., a performance management consulting and software solutions provider, has been selected as one of the Top 50 “Best Places to Work” by the Washington Business Journal. The citation solidifies the young company’s standing alongside some of the best-known firms in metropolitan Washington, DC.

The winning workplaces for this year’s competition are recognized in the April 25, 2008 issue of the newspaper, now on newsstands.

“We are so pleased to be recognized by the Washington Business Journal,” Spider Strategies partner and co-founder Conor D. Crimmins stated. “We’ve worked very hard over the past year to grow our business while maintaining a balance of fun and flexibility alongside our high standards for quality and customer service.”

Spider Strategies, founded in 2003, began as a web-solutions provider, helping national corporations establish effective web presences and build powerful additions to their marketing channels. In April 2004, Spider Strategies entered the Corporate Performance Management market with its first off-the-shelf software product, Scoreboard®. As one of the first software packages to combine scorecard theory with modern web technology, Scoreboard was tremendously successful and adopted across business, government, and educational institutions.

“Being named one of the Top 50 Places to Work in Washington is a great honor; this prize is recognition by our own employees that they love coming to work every day at Spider,” says Crimmins. “That is what is so rewarding to me and my Partners, we have helped to create and maintain a work environment that is highly productive while still being unique, fun, and enjoyable.”

In the fall of 2006, Spider Strategies released its Corporate Management Suite® (CMS), allowing managers to oversee complex, multi-dimensional, dynamic projects with scalable tools. This powerful software bundle combines the proven success of Scoreboard with project management, document management, and automated meetings. Powered by the latest web technologies, CMS is revolutionizing performance management.

Spider Strategies is now focused jointly on software and consulting, providing products and people to drive improvement in business and government performance. Spider Strategies addresses performance management needs with its easy to use, web-based software and a team of professional facilitators and planning and implementation consultants.
